POP LIFE.

All The Best New Pop Music From This Week

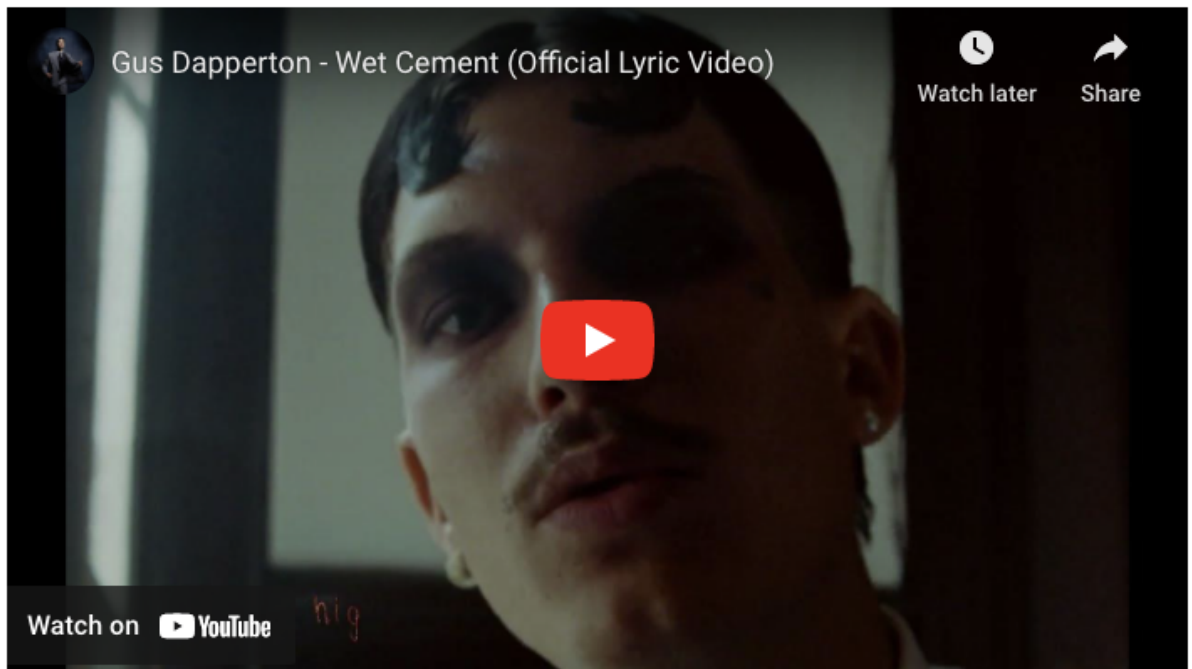

LEXI LANE
NOVEMBER 1, 2022

For those who might be feeling blue following Halloween weekend, have no fear. The musicians below have proven there's truly no shortage of pop music during the winter months. So, prepare your holiday decorations, gather some treats, find a spot to stay warm, and scroll below to see some of this week's best new pop tunes — because we all could use something to dance to... Or cry. Or both. You might even find a certain artist who puts the “R” in return. (Spoiler: She's in the photo above. It's Rihanna.)

Find the rest of Uproxx's Best New Pop weekly roundup below.

Gus Dapperton — “Wet Cement”

Dapperton's latest starts as a somber, calming single before transforming itself. By the time the beat changes, listeners realize “Wet Cement” is something different entirely, without ever feeling jarring or abrupt. There's even a psychedelic guitar solo toward the end.
