“Lovers From The Past” fuses a thumping bassline to nocturnal production. The beat pulsates as his gritty vocals echo through a hypnotic haze. Unspooling as an instantly arresting after-dark anthem, it captures the hallmarks of Mareux’s signature style, and it also hints at the scope of his ever-expanding world on Lovers From The Past, check out the full tracklisting below.

Last month, he set the stage for this season with “Night Vision.” It has already generated over half-a-million streams and counting. RAIN hailed it as “deeply confessional,” while Post-Punk.com christened it a “Lynchian dreamscape.” The accompanying music video stars RuPaul’s Drag Race’s fan-favorite contestant Gottmik - watch it HERE.

“Night Vision” landed in the wake of Mareux’s 2022 tracks “Glass” [feat. Not long after, the song gathered hundreds of millions of streams across platforms with north of 214 million on Spotify alone. #### ABOUT MAREUX:

As Mareux, musician and producer Aryan Ashtiani makes music filled with stories of unrequited yearning and the ghosts of lovers' past. Even before going viral in 2021 with "The Perfect Girl" (his interpretation of a 1987 song by The Cure), the Los Angeles-based artist has been steadily building an international cult following, from Eastern Europe to South America. After more than a decade of developing his post-punk and darkwave-inspired dance style of piercing synths, cavernous vocals, and forlorn melodies, he is finally unveiling his debut album, Lovers From the Past, via Warner Records/Revolution Records. It's a collection of sinister, yet magnetic tracks that explore heartbreak and disillusionment.

Having helped spark a resurgence of interest in post-punk and darkwave among a new generation online, Mareux finds himself at the forefront of the latest innovative strain of goth music. "I want to become a gateway to older subcultural genres for people who are just discovering alternative music today," he declares.
