Against a backdrop of melancholic keys, Choppa's razor-sharp verses highlight the haunting realities of gun violence, especially within his Memphis community. He raps with a heart-wrenching urgency: "I know some kids toting guns before they learn to tie their shoe. No more bedtime stories, they putting shit to sleep too." The refrain, "Can we live? We wanna live," echoes as both a plea and a rallying cry.

The accompanying visual paints an intimate portrait of loss and resilience, honoring those lost to senseless violence and underscoring the song's powerful message. Watch [\[HERE\]](#)

The new single follows the momentum of Choppa's groundbreaking collaboration with Imagine Dragons on the electrifying "Dare U," which has earned over 14.8M million global streams and garnered widespread acclaim. Billboard called it "an explosive collaboration," while VIBE praised Choppa as "the people's champion."

Choppa's prolific output this year solidifies his breakout status. His recent project, PICASSO: SLUFFIN SZN X SLUT SZN, was lauded by Complex as "a bold and versatile work." With over 9.6 billion global streams and 24 RIAA-certified plaques, the 22-year-old artist continues to redefine hip-hop's possibilities, transcending musical and cultural boundaries.

Beyond the music, NLE Choppa's impact resonates on multiple levels. His philanthropic efforts, such as his This Can't Be Vegan food truck and community literacy campaigns, demonstrate his commitment to driving meaningful change. At the same time, his creative pursuits extend to fashion collaborations and cinematic endeavors, proving his versatility as a modern cultural icon.

With a slate of powerful singles lined up for February, including “CAN WE LIVE?,” NLE Choppa is amplifying the voices of the unheard and challenging the world to confront issues head-on—all while cementing his place as a generational talent.
