February 21, 2025 (Los Angeles, CA) – Today, rising pop artist Jenna Raine celebrates her 21st birthday in style with new single “21” out now via Warner Records. Listen HERE!

About the song, she shares, “The past few years I've had this fear of getting older, which I think a lot of people my age can relate to as they leave their teenage years. But as I turn 21, I'm realizing it's supposed to be such an exciting age and there's still so much more life to experience. I wanted to write a song to remind myself that I don't need to take growing up so seriously, and hopefully it can be a reminder to others as well.”

The song illuminates the ebb and flow of her bright, upbeat songcraft. She repeats a positive reminder like a mantra, "Every little thing's gonna be alright. Every little thing's gonna be just fine." On the breezy chorus, she assures and accepts, "And it's okay if I mess things up just because it's fun. Guess that's twenty one."

Jenna's star continues to rise. Her 2024 hit "Roses" has amassed over 619 million views across platforms and more than 46.2 million streams to date. She most recently dropped a collaborative version of the track featuring Nashville singer-songwriter Avery Anna, which Girls' Life applauded, "their new track is everything we didn't know we needed." Next up, she's kicking off 2025 with a run of European tour dates supporting David Kushner, beginning on February 26.
