April 23, 2019 (Los Angeles, CA) – Today, emerging Baltimore rapper Shordie Shordie just dropped a new video for "Voice Mail" off his latest project Captain Hook. The video arrives on the heels of his viral smash hit "Bitchuary (Betchua)," which has generated over 6 million video views and continues to rise. "Voice Mail," directed by Six7, illustrates the all-too relatable impasse of having feelings for someone who won't reciprocate. Check it out below!

Shordie Shordie is making major moves in the rap game. At just 22, the budding star has garnered attention from the likes of The FADER, XXL, No Jumper and more as he aims to curate a new wave of music on the hip-hop scene. Keep an eye out for more to come this year!

MORE ABOUT SHORDIE SHORDIE:

Hailing from the Northeast side of Baltimore, Maryland, Shordie Shordie, born RaQuan Hudson, is exploding onto the rap game in full-force. He first emerged in music as a member of Peso Da Mafia, a hip-hop faction started with his brother and cousin, which produced viral hits such as "Money Man." Quickly, Shordie Shordie began generating much attention for the eccentricity and swag he portrayed in the group's videos – propelling his career as a solo artist. Setting the streets on fire with his viral "Bitchuary (Betchua)" visual, which is currently at over 6 million views and counting and is featured on his 2018 project, Captain Hook, Shordie Shordie is paving the way towards a brand-new generation of music.
