December 18, 2020 (Los Angeles) – Today, LA-based artist Dijon shares a new song. "The Stranger" is a rap-inspired posse cut of a folk song that is simultaneously light-hearted and cinematic in scope, featuring John C. Reilly, Tobias Jesso Jr., Sachi, Dan Reeder, and Becky and the Birds in a revolving door of star-studded collaborators.

Dijon says of the song: "I always wanted to make a duet and couldn't; got drunk and started what I wanted to be one, then had friends at the house and they sang harmonies while I slumped over embarrassingly trying not to throw up from the booze. This strange idea of creating a bizarre posse song, similar to a scenario by A Tribe Called Quest or something, but with guitars. Different voices on the same guitar loop was intriguing and I asked people I knew if they wanted to try it. Eventually Jack, Henry, and I randomly threw names in a hat of who would seem really strange and fun on it; mostly people we'd never heard on a song or on an album together. I am very appreciative that these people gave this a chance."

"The Stranger" is Dijon's first release since his cover of Chaka Khan's "sweet thing" in June and the May release of his critically-acclaimed EP, How Do You Feel About Getting Married?, which included "Jesse," Vice's #15 pick on their "100 Best Songs of 2020" list. He also revealed his collaboration with Charli XCX entitled "pink diamonds" from her new album How I Feel Now earlier in the year. How Do You Feel About Getting Married? builds from the Americana-tinged, R&B palate Dijon introduced on his debut EP Sci Fi 1, and NPR declared the project "a new peak in cerebral, soul-slicing honesty."

Listen to "The Stranger" (feat. Sachi, Dan Reeder, Tobias Jesso Jr., John C. Reilly, and Becky and the Birds) above and stay tuned for more from Dijon coming soon.
