You may have caught Smiley recently in Drake's Instagram stories, working out with The Boy himself. Now, the Toronto rapper is back with his latest flex: a music video for his new single "In My Zone."

His first new music of 2021, the track finds the Warner signee rapping in his trademark laconic, stream-of-consciousness flow over a looming trap beat by Dj Charlie B, Elxyee, and KFHITMAKER. "She wanna be known/I wanna get in my zone," he spits on the hook.

The visuals see Smiley and his crew post up at an all-night diner, immediately attracting the establishment's female clientele to their table for some food and conversation. Things then take a turn as we cut to a gym, where the rapper goes full Tony Horton, giving a motivational speech at a whiteboard before leading an intense workout session with the ladies, helping them burn off the pizza and wings ingested at the beginning of the video.

The scene is a clear nod to Smiley's newfound health regimen, which he's been showcasing via motivational posts on social media as of late. Good on the guy.
